THE BEST BUSINESS SECURITY.

The Green River Republican of Morgantown, in an editorial discussing the proposed Republican state platform convention, says:

"The ousiness men of Kentucky, regardless of politics, are looking for the party that will offer more business security and less politics. We want to start the factories we have, and build more, but the man with money enough to build a factory will hesitate until he sees the tickets nominated and the platform adopted. The good business man does not want anything but a square deal, but he does not want his property confiscated,

"Wise council should be used in nominating a ticket and in writing a platform. Men should be selected to write that platform who think. They should not be blind partisans, but they should have only the interest of the state at heart and in serving their state, they are serving their party.

"We think it would be wise, provided it could be done. for a committee to be appointed, say 30 days before the convention convenes, to prepare a platform to submit to the convention when it convenes. Say men like A. E. Willson, William Heyburn, George DuRelle of Louisville, Judge Andrew J. Kirk of Paintsville, Judge Robert H. Winn of Mt. Sterling, W. D. Cochran of Maysville, R. P. Ernst of Covington, Harry Giovannell of the Lexington Leader, McKenzie Moss of Bowling Green, Judge James Breathitt of Hopkinsville, Judge J. A. Dean of Owensboro, W. J. Deboe of Marion, Captain Ed Farley of Paducah, Judge Lewis Walker of Lancaster, G. W. Welsh of Danville, D. C. Edwards of London, L. W. Bethurnm of Mt. Vernou, W. S. Bell of Hardinsburg, and ten or 15. other gentlemen of like standing in the community in which they live and let those men get up the data and lick it into a platform to recommend to the state convention.

"We would be assured of something sensible in advance, something the independent voter would read and consider, make it a campaign document. Who would not prefer a platform of that kind to one written in three hours by n jumped-up committee, such as are generally appointed at state conventions?'

The editor of the Green River Republican states the case exactly when he says that the business men of Kentucky are desirous of supporting that party which will "offer more business security and less polities."

Kentucky has been so cursed by politics and so torn by political strife and scramble for office during recent years that every interest, educational, agricultural and commercial, has suffered for want he legislation and efficient administration.

The condition of things at Frankfort today is strikingly illustrative of this assertion. How many of the state officials are going over the state electioneering, rather than attending to the duties of their high and important offices? About every one of them except the Governor is either an actual or a prospective candidate for some other job, and if they are elected to another "chair" they will repeat the performance four years later and thus perpetuate themselves in office until the list is exhausted.—Lexington Leader.

The women of a town can do a lot for it, says the Community Builder, In many American towns the women's clubs are found working for civic betterment-more parks, cleaner streets and cleaner morals. But a woman can do much as an individual just as she can as a member of a club. She can encourage her husband to interest himself in movements for the public good. She can exert an influence where mere man has much less influence than she has; for she can teach the children of her own home and of the whole neighborhood pride in the home town and an ambition to make it a clean and well governed city. The town that becomes a model of its size is the town where both men and women are planning for it and working for it all the time.

Among the methods for making buckle tongue meet which the financiers at Washington at reported as considering is the restoration of the duty on sugar. The Courier-Journal urgently warned them not to reduce this, an essentially revenue duty, but they were deaf. The bait of "a free breakfast table" was too much for the politicians. But it is too late now to rectify their misdoing. This is no time nor opportunity for perfecting the Underwood tariff.—Courier-Journal.
